

Showcasing research from the Toshio Naito Laboratory at Graduate School of Science and Engineering, Ehime University, Matsuyama 790-8577, Japan.

A possibly highly conducting state in an optically excited molecular crystal

Direct observation of magnetic and conducting properties has indicated that there should be unique UV-excited state like metallic substances in an insulating molecular crystal.

As featured in:

See Toshio Naito et al.,
J. Mater. Chem. C, 2019, 7, 9175.